ABOUT THIS GUIDE

This video discussion guide is one of a set of six discussion guides available for peer educators to use to educate young and middle adolescents about sexual and reproductive health in the Asia Pacific Region.

The discussion guides each incorporate an AMAZE educational video that addresses a topic and can be used to supplement existing lesson plans or resources that you may already be using to provide sexual and reproductive health information to young people. Each video discussion guide consists of an introduction to the topic of the video, a screening of the video, discussion and reflection questions, and an optional activity and/or quiz.

INTIMATE PARTNER VIOLENCE

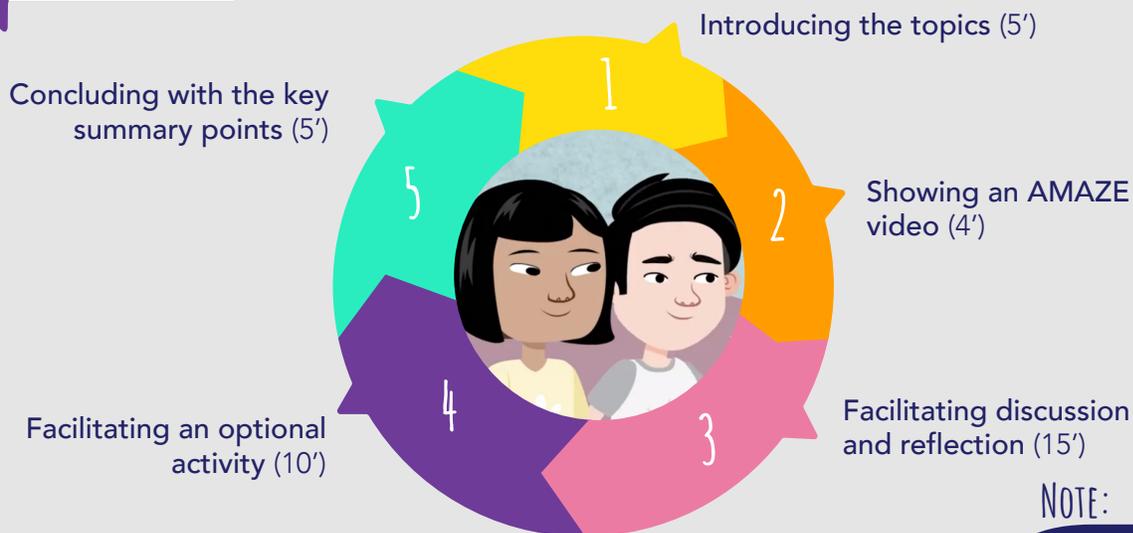

OBJECTIVE:

To provide young people with an overview about intimate partner violence, including types and signs of violence, by showing an AMAZE video and facilitating a discussion and opportunity for reflection.

CORE STEPS:

NOTE:

These are the suggested approximate duration times for each step.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

Young and middle adolescents aged 10 - 18 years old

DURATION:

30 - 40 minutes

ADDITIONAL MATERIALS:

- Video link: https://bit.ly/_intimatepartnerviolence
- For the in-person activities, you will need:
- Computer with internet access and speakers
 - LCD projector and screen, or table to put your computer on
 - Sticky notes, paper board/flip chart, and colorful pens for Discussion and Reflection
- For the virtual option, you will need:
- Zoom/Google Meet access
 - Google Jamboard for Discussion and Reflection

INTIMATE PARTNER VIOLENCE

OPENING:

Intimate partner violence, sometimes called “teen dating violence” or “domestic violence,” is when a person behaves in a way to control the other person in an intimate relationship. Intimate relationships can exist between girlfriends and boyfriends, romantic partners, lovers, or husbands and wives. Now, let’s watch an AMAZE video to learn more about intimate partner violence.

DISCUSSION AND REFLECTION QUESTIONS:

After showing the video, lead a discussion using the following questions. Pace the discussion according to the available time and prioritize the questions you want to discuss.

1. What was it like to watch this video? What is your initial reaction?
2. How easy or difficult can it be to know which acts are considered intimate partner violence, or caring? How can a person differentiate them?
3. Read the scenario below and ask participants whether they think the partner is caring or controlling and why.

My partner is always texting me to find out where I am and what I’m doing. He sometimes gets a little upset if I take too long to respond. I think he does it because he really likes me, but my mom thinks it’s not good. Is there something wrong with him wanting to know where I am?

4. After watching the video, was there a specific scenario that came to your mind from reading a book or watching a movie? What are some ways people can contribute to a world with less intimate partner violence?
5. What are your key takeaways from this video and discussion?

NOTE:

Encourage contributions from participants, but it’s okay if some are not comfortable speaking - don’t force anyone to answer if they don’t want to. You can also consider using sticky notes or a Google Jamboard so participants can write their thoughts anonymously.

DO!

- Respect participants’ opinions
- Practice active listening
- Use inclusive and gender-neutral terms
- Give everyone a chance to answer share
- Remind participants to be respectful of others and practice active listening

SPECIAL NOTE FOR PEER EDUCATORS

- This discussion may trigger trauma in participants who are currently or have previously experienced intimate partner violence. Be sure to let them know they can talk to you after the session if they would like to. Be prepared to provide credible referrals or information and qualified online or offline counselling or health services as needed.
- It’s important not to encourage participants to share their personal stories or experiences in the group context.
- Avoid making any assumptions about participants’ personal relationships.
- Be mindful and responsive to participants’ reactions and engagement should you need to adjust questions or the flow of activities along the way.
- Be attentive to participants’ special needs. Some participants may need special arrangements to be able to engage in discussions or activities. For instance, you can adjust the physical space to accommodate participants with limited mobility or modify the activity to require less movement.

INTIMATE PARTNER VIOLENCE

OPTIONAL ACTIVITY:

This activity provides an interactive way for participants to further reflect on the information shared in the video.

Explain to participants that next they will do a cooking competition to cook up a healthy relationship meal. Encourage participants to imagine that they will be doing a fast cook. Divide participants into two teams of chefs, and ask two volunteers who will not be in the team, to be the judges. Lead participants to think of a 'healthy relationship' as a dish that they have to cook very quickly. If doing the activity virtually, put the groups into separate breakout rooms.

Ask the chefs to identify key ingredients and the measurements that will be needed to cook a healthy relationship. Ask a prompt question, like, "what key ingredients would you put into this dish?" Remind participants to be realistic with the ingredients: for example, it's okay to add real human emotions like jealousy or anger, as long as they are adding healthy communication and boundaries to respond to those emotions.

After five minutes of discussion, each team and the judges will return to the main forum, and the representative of each team will present the recipe to the judges. Then, the judges will select a winner and explain why.

Thank participants for actively engaging in this activity, and prompt participants to reflect by asking questions like:

1. "What was it like to make the healthy relationship dish?" to the chefs, or "what was it like to judge the dish?" to the judges.
2. What were some similarities or differences in the dishes?
3. What is your key takeaway or lesson learned from this cooking competition?

INTIMATE PARTNER VIOLENCE

KEY SUMMARY POINTS:

Conclude the session by sharing the key summary points below:

When two people are in a relationship, they still have to respect one another's boundaries and ask for and receive consent for all sexual behaviors. To build a healthy relationship, it helps to know your boundaries, exercise giving and receiving consent, and build the relationship with love, honesty, trust, and respect. It is crucial to understand the key characteristics of a healthy relationship, in order to be able to better recognize when a relationship is unhealthy and differentiate between these, such as by not mistaking controlling behavior for love.

Intimate partner violence is not always physical, which includes hitting, punching, or kicking, but may also include stalking a partner, following them wherever they go, refusing to leave, controlling their behaviour, or harassing them in person or by phone/texts, emails, or posts. Forcing a partner to engage in sexual behaviors without their permission is also sexual abuse.

If someone is being name-called, yelled at, humiliated, gaslighted, or told what they can do and cannot do by their partner, they are a victim of emotional or psychological abuse. There is also another form of intimate partner violence where some people control their partner's access to money, which is financial abuse.

Remember that all forms of intimate partner violence can be a one-off incident or repeated incidents – the latter is what we more commonly refer to as 'abuse', and both are unacceptable. If you know someone who is currently or has previously experienced intimate partner violence, you should never blame the survivor or person who has experienced violence. You can be vocal about offering a safe space, being an active and supportive listener, and encouraging them to talk to a trusted adult.

Abuse - Any action that intentionally harms or injures another person. When someone abuses another person, it means that they are seeking to control the other person through abuse.¹

Boundaries - limits and rules a person can set within relationships. A person with healthy boundaries can say “no” to others when they want to, but they are also comfortable opening themselves up to intimacy and close relationships.²

Consent - People are actively willing to engage in a particular behavior or activity, and express their consent by saying "Yes! That is ok with me" verbally, or through non-verbal gestures like willingly nodding head, sign language, or a written sign.³

Emotional Abuse - Pattern of behavior in which the perpetrator insults, humiliates, and generally instills fear in an individual in order to control them. The individual's reality may become distorted as they internalize the abuse as their own failings.⁴ It includes undermining a person's sense of self-worth through constant criticism; belittling one's abilities; name-calling or other verbal abuse; damaging a partner's relationship with the family; or not letting a partner see friends and family.⁵

Gaslighting - a form of psychological manipulation in which the abuser attempts to sow self-doubt and confusion in their victim's mind. Typically, gaslighters are seeking to gain power and control over the other person, by distorting reality and forcing them to question their own judgment and intuition.⁶

Intimate Partner Violence - A pattern of behavior in any relationship that is used to gain or maintain power and control over an intimate partner.⁷ It causes physical, sexual or psychological harm, including physical aggression, sexual coercion, psychological abuse and controlling behaviours.⁸

Physical Abuse - Hurting or trying to hurt a partner by hitting, kicking, burning, grabbing, pinching, shoving, slapping, hair-pulling, biting, denying medical care or forcing alcohol and/or drug use, or using other physical force.⁹
